X16707_en

Write a program that reads a text and prints the quoted fragment with the larger number of words in it. If there are several quoted fragments with longest size, only the first one must be printed. If there are no quoted fragments, the output must be No quotes found. For instance, given the text:

Mary arrived home and said " what a day " . The dog looked up at her and replied " whof "

the answer should be: what a day

Input

The input is a sequence of tokens. Most tokens are words. Some of the tokens may be quotes or punctuation signs. Punctuations and quotes are always separated from nearby words with whitespaces. The input sequence may extend over more than one line. There is always an even number of quotes in the text.

Output

The output is the sequence of tokens inside the first quoted fragment with largest number of words. If there is no such sequence, the output is No quotes found.

Sample input 1

" We have no useful information on whether users are at risk " said James A. Talcott of Boston Cancer Institute . A Lorillard spokeswoman said " This is an old story . We're talking about years ago before anyone heard of asbestos having any questionable properties. There is no asbestos in our products now " . The Lorillard spokeswoman said asbestos was used in " very modest amounts " in making paper for the filters in the early 1950s and replaced with a different type of filter in 1956 .
